A Fine Time at the Lake.

Last evening Mr. S. P. Teasdel's employees finished their semi-annual stock staking, and were generously invited by Mr. S. to a trip to the lake. Some fifteen of them went out on the bathing train, and a lol-lier crowd has rarely been seen. They went out to have a good time, They went out to have a good time, and judging by appearances, they had it. Some one remarked on arrival at Black Rock, "What a hungry-looking army," and we should say what a thirsty one, too, by the numerous cries of "brewery," but it was apparently a watchword, as they all appeared as though ready to begin selling goods on their arrival in the city. We are sure they were pleased with their trip, and from what some of the boys said they whehed to thank Mr. Teastel publicly for his kindness.
